THE SENTINEL.

Tuesday, January 15, 1867.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Meeting of Congress—The Radicals and the Impeachment of the President—A Division in the Party—The People of the North Conservative—The Supreme Court in the Way of the Radicals—The Toledo Apothecary—The Assassins of Lincoln—New Facts—The Tariff Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12, 1867.

That Congress will meet on the 4th of March and remain in continuous session during the term of two years, there is no longer a doubt.—The bill has passed, and a two-thirds majority will override a veto. The question is as to the object of the measure. It was represented by some that Congress would do nothing more than to organize, and then take a recess. But the better advised members of the party say that Congress must take up the practical, as well as the political subjects, which at the present session will be left over. These are all great subjects, as to which the people will be divided.

Prominent Radical Senators and Representatives are now divided in opinion upon the expediency of impeaching the President. Senators say that if the articles of impeachment be presented to them, as a court, they cannot possibly dispose of them within a less time than six or seven months. As a court for that purpose, they cannot take up any other subject during that time. There are lawyers in the Senate who will not hazard their reputation by a mock trial. The two-thirds of the Senate, requisite for conviction and removal, would not be found.

Radical members of the House say that they cannot venture upon impeachment as a mere party experiment. A failure in it would, they say, be destructive to them. So the House will be decided upon the matter.

Now for the views of the Radical extremists on the subject. They say, and with much plausibility, that the Radical party cannot stand still and that advance is necessary to existence.—They say that the Republicans, at the fall elections, succeeded because of the unpopularity of Andrew Johnson in the North. They declare that at the close of the 14th August convention in Philadelphia, they were a beaten party, and that the elections were only secured by some fortunate accidents, like the New Orleans riots and the President's tour. Such riots they cannot expect again, and, on the contrary, events bearing on politics will probably prejudice their party.

The majority of the people of the North are naturally, and from instinct, and from interest, conservative. This conservative strength is every day augmenting, and is now [illegible]. Therefore, say the leaders of the extreme Radical wing of the party, we must go ahead at once, or we lose all.

They admit that they cannot carry out their programme while the President can perform his constitutional functions, nor while the United States Supreme Court is likely to stand in their way, as it will do, even upon the threshold of their projects,—the adoption of the amendment of the Constitution, upon a ratification of a less number than three-fourths of the Legislatures of all the States, including the ten unrepresented States, which States that Court has recognized as within the Union.

The President has been encouraged to stand by his declarations that he will support the laws and the Constitution, in every struggle that may occur between the Executive and Congress. He will no doubt do this, especially if supported by the decision of the Supreme Court.

The House Committee on the Judiciary have commenced their inquiry into the charges presented by the Toledo apothecary, Mr. Ashley. They of course summoned the prosecutor as the first witness. We shall learn little of the proceedings of this petty court of inquiry, until they shall make up their report.

The Judiciary Committee will drop the inquiry, for the time, as soon as John H. Surratt shall come within their reach. They will endeavor to make something out of him, and promise, as a consideration, perhaps, to save his neck from the halter.

It is said that the principal witness against Mrs. Surratt will be proved, upon the next investigation, to have been suborned, or to have been unworthy of belief.

The new tariff bill, as originally passed by the House, at the last session, and now modified by the Senate, will be highly and abominably protective of iron and wool and woolen interests. Cotton manufacturers need nothing of that sort. But all the manufacturing interests cry aloud for relief from the five per cent. excise on their products.—Cor. Rich. Examiner.

Little as may be thought of it, the misrepresentations of the South at the North, and the ignorance of Southern life which prevails there, are now doing more harm to the country than all other things combined. If this pestilent error could be removed the Union would be speedily restored to peace and prosperity. In view of these facts it is exceedingly difficult to exercise patience toward such men as ex-Gov. Holden, of North Carolina, who did as much as any other man in the State for secession, but afterwards changed sides, and is now the correspondent and informer of Stevens and Sumner—taking every pains to convince them that the State is unfit for reconstruction or for anything else except despotic military rule. Indeed, he is the author of the Stevens bill for territorializing the State. The reason for this course, on his part, is evident. He was beaten before the people for Governor, and hopes, if Congress take the State in hand, that he will be appointed to position. The depravity which could seek to injure a whole people for such an end is almost inconceivable. Yet it exists in more cases than one, and is to-day the greatest obstacle in the way of Southern safety and prosperity.

We have long been hoping that the "Southern Loyalists" would be found out, and be consigned to infamy and contempt by the Northern people whom they are deceiving for their own selfish purposes; and we still cannot help believing that their failure and condemnation are very near at hand. The patience and conservatism of the Southern people, under heavy trials, are probably doing much to hasten that retribution, and a continuance in the same course will be almost certain to bring it to pass. THE SENTINEL.

WM. E. PELL, SEATON GALES, } Editors.

Tuesday Evening, Jan. 15, 1867.

Decision of the Supreme Court.

The friends of constitutional liberty in the United States had great cause of rejoicing over the decision of the Supreme Court, recently, in the case of Military Commissions. This joy will be increased, on reading our dispatch, today, announcing the decision of that body in two cases involving the test-oath in regard to lawyers and upon the Missouri test-oath. The principles maintained by the Court, though not directly involving the question of the validity of the test-oath in regard to members of Congress, yet settle fully the unconstitutionality of the oath passed by Congress in 1862, as applicable to all.

We are glad to be permitted to copy the following telegram from a distinguished Counsellor in the Supreme Court to a friend in this State:

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 14.

"Congressional and Missouri test-oath unconstitutional."

An impression seems to have got into the minds of the negroes hereabouts that the United States Government has begun the distribution of the lands and other property of "rebels" in the States South and Southwest of us, and many seem indifferent to entering into engagements for service this year, anticipating that the "distribution of the spoils" will begin ere long hereabouts. We suggest that it is the duty of all persons of intelligence to set any who may have received these impressions, who may come in their way, right. If any of our freedmen want land given to them without paying for it, they can get it in Florida, Alabama and other States in which the Government owns, by becoming actual settlers upon the land. The land is yet uncleared and unbroken, and the settler will need stock, tools and food, (or money to procure these necessary articles,) before he can think of pre-empting it, and the only way to get it will be by hard work and honest means.—Wadesboro' Argus.

The above corresponds with our information from other parts of the State. We learn, from several counties, that our planters have not been able yet to make contracts with laborers for the year. This state of things must be ruinous both to black and white, and shows that our censures are just upon those persons in this State, who are laboring to interest the colored population in political affairs.

Those miserable demagogues and incendiaries, who are thus operating upon our colored population, are doing an amount of mischief whose results cannot be foretold. It requires no demonstration to prove, that certain ruin must follow any teaching which inculcates the idea, that our former laboring population, by their changed condition, can live as proprietors and self managers, discarding the system of regular laborers on the farm. Even if our laboring population had the means to procure lands of their own, the manifest incapacity of ninety-nine out of a hundred to conduct a farm themselves, judiciously and skillfully, ought to make them hesitate. Landed proprietors can- [illegible] injury sustained by having their lands badly cultivated, and fences and ditches destroyed, would be incalculable. As a general rule, men really competent to manage, themselves, find but little difficulty in getting lands.

That was a significant announcement, flashed over the cable on yesterday, that the next steamer from across the Atlantic would bring back a large amount of U. S. securities, for which purchasers can not be had, on account of the conviction, in financial circles, that the projected impeachment of the President is full of menace to the stability of the Government.—John Bull is wary in money matters, far-sighted and sagacious. He justly recognizes, as does the intelligent, dispassionate judgment of Christendom, that the mad crusade of the Radicals against the laws and the Constitution, the Executive and the Judiciary, must, if persisted in and crowned with success, utterly ruin the country and all its interests,—social, industrial, political and financial.

The common sufferings and persecutions under which we labor are a good introduction to an industrial age. Such a period requires a large application of the associative principle, and, properly considered, demands an unselfish and elevated tone of mind. The times are favorable to these, and ought to do much to help us to become thrifty and enterprising, without degenerating into merely cunning graspers after wealth.

One C. W. Butts, living in Norfolk, has forwarded to Senator Robinson, of the Virginia Legislature, a petition requesting the Assembly to dissolve itself and abolish the State government. There is a Japanese process of disembowelling oneself, upon an intimation by the Tycoon that such a proceeding on the part of the subject would be agreeable to his Highness, that is known as hari-skari. Whether the Legislature of Virginia will perform this feat at the bidding of Butts, time will show. The Richmond Whig thinks that an appropriate response, on their part, would be to vote the petitioner a rope and request him to hang himself.

We see it stated that a Mr. Fuller, of the Illinois Senate, has introduced a bill to "change the Great Seal of the State," the legend upon which is "State Sovereignty, National Union." He objects to this device as disloyal. To render it an entirely loyal seal, we suppose, it should be changed to "Federal Sovereignty, State Destruction," and the seal should be required to take the test-oath!

The New York Tribune has an article entitled "How the South Stands;" which is full of misrepresentation of our people and their views. In view of its character, it should be followed by one entitled "How the Tribune Lies."

Agriculture.

The agricultural resources of North Carolina have not been developed, perhaps, a tithe of their actual capacity. Even our best farming lands, in the hands of our best farmers, have not been brought up to half the productiveness which they might be, under a thoroughly scientific and skillful management. Many of our best farmers have been improvised or have taken up the vocation at mature periods of life, and have had to learn as they practised. Among those who have been trained from childhood to the vocation, there are few, if any, who have ever become thoroughly skilled in the science or practice of farming. Most are plodders, following the same plans, using the same implements, and pursuing the same ends as preceding generations. The causes for this are various:

1. The present almighty dollar, rendered necessary often by the surroundings or condition of the farmer, has been the object of pursuit. Our planters have not lived for posterity.—Our noble forests have been felled to open broad acres to be rendered sterile and waste by bad cultivation. Land has been added to lands, not to be improved and rendered capable of supporting a large population, but to afford employment to the growing numbers of domestics who were to be fed and clothed. Hence, in a comparatively new country, we have tracts of land, which ought to have been improved by cultivation, worn out and turned out to grow up, to be again cut down and worn out by the succeeding generation, or to remain waste and unoccupied.

2. The system of large farms, to support large gangs of slaves who never attained any skill in agriculture, may be chargeable to some extent with this state of things. Fewer laborers, better taught on smaller farms, enriched and improved by better cultivation, would have left all the States east of the Mississippi, in the slave States, with one half of their original forests still standing, and the other half so well cultivated as to provide better for five or ten times their present population, than the present open lands can now provide for their present occupants.

3. Another cause of the beggared condition of agriculture in the South has been the little attention given to the use of improved farming implements. The implements now used, on three-fourths of the farms in the South, are perhaps not a whit better than those used thirty, forty and fifty years ago. When proper attention has been given to this subject, the clearest improvements have been manifest.

In the present experiment with free labor, great changes must take place in all these respects.—Whatever may be the quantity or character of the lands owned by large landed proprietors, the day has gone by for the employment of the former large numbers of hands by the same proprietor or manager. However safe, or profitable or economical it was in the days of slavery to group together large numbers of laborers on the same farm, it will be found far less so in the management or employment of free labor.

It strikes us the true policy now is small [illegible] ment, and the deficit in land and labor to be made up by proper fertilizers and manures and the most improved implements of husbandry. We are glad to find that our trading people are furnishing fertilizers, lime, &c., in unusual quantities, and we hope at low prices. And it affords us pleasure to repeat that Messrs. B. P. Williamson & Co. and Mr. Towles, of this city, and Messrs. Mitchell, Allen & Co., of Newbern, are contributing largely to supply improved agricultural implements. The last named firm in Newbern, we see, have recently added largely to their means of supplying the demand by the establishment of a plow factory. Messrs. B. P. Williamson & Co. have for some time had one of the largest plow factories, in this city, in operation, to be found in the State. The State may regard those who furnish fertilizers and implements, on good terms to our farmers, as real benefactors.

Veribad Hokes.—Our cotemporary of the Charlotte Times, apparently very seriously, publishes a professed official communication to the Congress, signed by the above name, as the Chief Detective of the United States, in which he represents that, after a most thorough investigation into the charge that secret political disloyal associations are in existence in the South, he can find no trace of them. This statement is doubtless correct, but we are inclined to think that the whole matter is a very bad hoax.

Thad. Stevens was thought to possess influence in Pennsylvania, but, when put to the test, the result is—seven votes for Senator in the Radical legislature of that State. He is represented, by Washington letter-writers, as wofully crest-fallen. Aside from his personal humiliation, may we not infer pleasing political auguries? May we not construe so decisive a defeat as indicating that he is too radical even for Pennsylvania Radicals?

Another of the numerous Mexican leaders, Canales, has started a little revolution on his own account. There are now about as many separate revolutionary commands in Mexico as there are leaders. Each of these leaders is going it "on his own hook." Each is for "God and Liberty" and the pocket-book of whoever does not belong to his faction. Interesting country.

Wendell Phillips, in the latest number of the Anti-Slavery Standard, says that "slavery, with all its most horrible auxiliaries, is in form and fact re-established in the South." There are some falsehoods so brazen as to be in a measure sublime. This is a choice specimen of the class in question.

Our Ex. P. G. has been elected an honorary member of the National Rights League Convention of Colored Men, which is at present in session in Washington. Among others similarly favored, we notice the names of Forney, ex-Gov. Andrew, Fred. Douglass, Butler, and Miss Anna Dickinson.

A Moorish Legend.

A SEMI-ALLEGORICAL STORY IN FIVE CHAPTERS.

CHAPTER I.

Long time ago in Andalusia, before the Caliph William Tecumseh had scourged that beautiful land and made it a desert, there lived a wandering Arab of exquisite ornithological tastes, who succeeding in taming a male ostrich until the wonderful bird almost equalled himself in wisdom and cunning. This Arab was skilled beyond most of his nomadic tribe in dissecting the brains of terrapins, tadpoles and tumble-bugs, and in other useful entomological pursuits, by which he managed to earn a living. But his principal skill was in composing madrigals, which he sang at the top of his voice by the roadside, accompanied with appropriate saltatory action illustrative of the sentiment embodied in his various songs. To captivate passers-by he had taught his ostrich to drone an accompaniment and also on occasion to dance for a dinner—though these saltations were certainly after a very grotesque and uncouth fashion. In truth this ostrich was pronounced by high authority to be the worst looking bird in all Andalusia. He had been teased by the dogs, and plucked of his feathers by mischievous boys, until his embarrassment was a sore grievance not only to himself but to all delicate beholders. But his awkward attempt at music, and his ambitious but ungainly terpsichorean efforts, at the Arab's command, were vastly amusing to the youngsters, who always applauded "to the echo," though there might be some slight suspicion of irony in their extravagant praises.

Not so with the gay Troubadour. His personal pulchritude was unmistakable. But as if luxuriant Nature had neglected her duty, he bedecked his person in the airy and rather fantastical habiliments of the glorious age of chivalry and Charlemagne. His head was adorned with a jaunty cocked hat, surmounted with a profusion of feathers—ostrich and peacock tastefully intermingled. He was be-ruffled, be-flounced, and be-turbelowed from the chin to his yellow Iberian boots, each of which was laced with a bright red string, with blue tassels. Zara Ben Jeames, for so was the Arab called, was very happy; and the ostrich was equally happy in Zara Ben Jeames. They seemed to be made for each other, and might indeed have been well called birds of a feather—and together the twain wandered for many a day over the Andalusian plains, exercising each his peculiar gifts.

CHAPTER II.

All things for a while moved on as merry as marriage bells. They sang together—and together they danced and turned somersaults, to the infinite amusement of all street idlers—and the youngsters, both Spanish and Mauritanian, absolutely screamed for joy. But one day in the height of the fun, came round the hat!—The workman is worthy of his hire, quoth Zara Ben Jeames. The ostrich echoed the sentiment by droning a sonorous assent, and bowing his head, and then turning another experimental somersault. It all would not do. The Andalusians were willing enough to be amused by any sort of extravagansas—but had no penny to pay the pipers. They had not been spared even the pence due to the Holy St. Peter. The last shilling had gone in the way of taxes.—These might be deemed reasons sufficient. But the Bard and the Bird were inexorable—even clamorous—and again, with sneers, pushed round the hat. The Andalusians in their turn became enraged, and rose up against the vagabond minstrels, and bade them begone!—and earn their bread by the sweat of their faces, as all honest Andalusians should do; and to no longer claim the right to reap where they have not sown. Hereupon these peripatetics made faces in derision, and screeched and howled and [illegible] people were vexed within them, and they swore by the holy poker of Jehosaphat, to drive from their borders, into San Salvador, or some other warm region, this impudent brace of Phillistines.

CHAPTER III.

There was a brave young man somewhere in the Pyrenees, a dexterous horseman of stalwart arm, and stout of heart, tending his father's sheep. Him they summoned and armed with a spear, and besought to chase both ostrich and man out of their borders, that their ears might no longer be pierced by their detestable discords; that they might again sit each under his own fig tree, and once more be at rest. Zebulon, for so was he called in the mountains, forthwith girded his loins, mounted an Arabian courser, and sallied forth to extirpate the nuisance. The pair, perceiving the evil, had betaken themselves to a thick wood, being very timid and easily alarmed when danger was brewing—and sometimes when it was not. They were one day sitting by the side of a fountain, called El Dolores, very hungry and very forlorn. They had been lamenting the luxuries they had lost, and Zara had finished his usual dissertation on crabs, oysters, and other shell-fish, of which he assured the ostrich, with a jeer, that if they could only procure a supply, they would manage the dinner very well, as he could appropriate the fleshy parts to himself, and the shells, being swallowed by the ostrich, would demonstrate beautifully his astonishing digestive powers.—But as they had neither meat nor shell in their expatriation, and as they remembered the good old days of plenty, their hearts sunk within them, and with much sighing and sobbing they lifted up the voice of lamentation in that beautiful Moorish song of desolation and grief, "Woe is me, Alhama,"—when Zebulon blew his horn! and his bounding steed answered with a loud and triumphant ha! ha! we have found them!

CHAPTER IV.

The race was a short one. Zara Ben Jeames being slow of foot, and of small courage, incontinently took to a tree, and the horseman and ostrich had it alone. Some very tall walking, aided by featherless wings, was achieved that day. The huntsman was close behind, with flashing eye, unerring hand, and spear that is sure to pierce the game whenever hurled. The chase is exciting. On, on, for your life! Ah! that zig-zag-ing comes too late, poor bird!—The avenger is up to all those tricks. Your doom is fixed! Dash for that hillock of sand! Plunge in your devoted head, six inches deep—and die!

CHAPTER V.

(Zebulon, soliloquising.) "Silly specimen of ornithology! Why, an Ex-Provisional Governor could scarcely be so absurd! Thou thinkest, that, because thou hast hidden thine own silly head in the sand, no one else sees thee! A pretty exhibition thou hast made of thyself, on a dead level, too! Thou art greatly embarrassed, doubtless, and from my soul I pity thee. I cannot smite thee, all exposed as thou art. A sad and unbeseeming spectacle art thou to men, angels and young Africans, who will gaze at, and scoff at, and spurn thee! They have long ago found thee out, and thou knowest it not. I leave thee to God and thy conscience. Live in peace, if thou canst. My trusty blade would blush to enter thee thus. Not a drop of thy precious blood, albeit impregnated with iron or lead, or, peradventure, with arsenic, shall stain its unsullied brightness. This is a large world, and there is room in it even for such as thee,—to make up an assortment. Go and sin no more! Farewell, silly specimen of ornithology! But do not deceive thyself with the thought that, because thou hast stupidly hidden thine own eyes under the sand, that other eyes have not seen, and scanned and studied, and understood thee."

Fra Diavolo.

(End of the Legend.)

What were the meditations of Zara Ben Jeames in the tree top, and how long he staid there; what were the musings of the ostrich while his head was buried in the sand and he dreamed that no one could see him, and how long he kept it there; and what report of the chase was made by Zebulon to the Andalusians, and how they received the report; and the bloody wars that followed, are themes that invoke the Historic Muse. From the Goldsboro News.

The Standard vs. Truth.

A man once remarked, that all the statements of a neighbor of his were believed, because he always told a reasonable truth. A specious falsehood may be believed, and many such are received as truths at Washington. The Standard has some how or other lost its balance.—Do they keep Christmas in Raleigh until the 8th of January? Has some friend been sending the editor egg-nog? or has he been frightened? He writes strangely for a man of truth—we mean no disrespect to our cotemporary, personally; but we fear that his late trip to Washington, and his new associates, so recently formed, have had a rather damaging effect upon him.

It has been said that a man may repeat what is not true, until he believes it himself. In the Standard of the 8th, we find the following:

"The people of this State, of both races, have a right to memorialize the Congress, and they will exercise this right. No power can prevent them from doing it. We tell the people that they are free. No grand juries will dare, even under the orders of Gov. Worth, to indict them because they have thought proper to sign petitions to Congress."

Now we rejoice to learn that we are free; we begin to feel so since a certain decision was made declaring the trials of civilians by military courts illegal. We are free! Mr. Holden says so! Amen! We are "free to petition to Congress," C-e-r-t-a-i-n-l-y! If Mr. Holden, and Handy Lockett, and Friday Jones, and Bill Campton, and all the negroes in the State wish to talk to Congress, let them talk! He says truly, "no grand juries will dare indict them." Let them "percede;" Governor Worth will not order them to be indicted. No Judge will charge a jury to do so, for the most of the Judges of the circuit courts were appointed by Gov. Holden when he was our Provisional Governor. As to those of the Supreme Court, we presume he need not fear them.

But, "presto! change!" In the same article we find the following startling sentence:

"We tell the Congress that treason has got to such a pitch in this State, that those of our people who presume to send memorials to it are in danger of being indicted and punished."

How can both of these statements be true? In one breath you say "the people are free—no power can prevent them from sending memorials—no jury will dare indict them," &c., and then in the next "we tell the Congress that the people who send the memorials, &c., are in danger of being indicted and punished." Which statement is true and which false? If you have not broken the commandment which says, "thou shalt not bear false witness," you have cracked it. Study the commandments, dear brother, and improve your morals and your speech.

Daring Outrage.—A most daring outrage was committed on the person and property of William F. Hartley, at his residence on North [illegible] on Monday night last.

It appears that about 2 o'clock a. m., a band of deperadoes, some ten to twelve in number, went to Mr. Hartley's house, and making no attempt at secrecy, a portion of them surrounded the building and notified the inmates, on pain of death, not to open the doors.

Mr. H. had in his house a double and a single barrelled gun, loaded with duck shot. These lodds he deliberately drew and supplied their places with buck shot. Despite the entreaties of his wife, who was sick, he then partially opened one of his doors, when the cry was raised, shoot the damned ——, and three guns were instantly discharged at the door, Mr. H. receiving slight wounds from a few glancing buck shot. He then threw the door open and fired one barrel into the smoke house, where a party of negroes were plundering, and then jumped into the yard and fired the second barrel in the same direction, and returned for his other gun and fired at the party, who were now retreating in some confusion. He quickly reloaded both guns, and calling a negro man who lived in his kitchen, gave him the single barrelled gun, and they started towards the landing in pursuit.

The negroes hearing them coming through the bushes halted and the leader ordered a charge, when some six or eight guns were discharged in the direction of the pursuer, but without effect. The negroes made the landing and took to their boats, and as they pushed off Mr. H. and the negro with him fired at the party, with what effect he does not know.

Returning to his house he found all his meat in bags or lying on the ground, and nothing missing but a few bushels of potatoes which the negroes must have removed before Mr. H. was aware of their presence. Traces of blood showed that Mr. Hartley's shooting was not all in vain.—Newbern Commercial.

The Position of North Carolina.

We are indebted to Hon. Bedford Brown, who, it will be remembered, was Senator in Congress some two generations ago, for a copy of resolutions reported in the State Senate of North Carolina by Hon. Livingston Brown from the Judiciary Committee. Ex-Senator Brown visits Washington, with other gentlemen, who constitute a State commission, to look after the interests of North Carolina in respect to the operation of the tax law and other important matters.—National Intelligencer.

What Forney Says of the New Radical Senator.—Simon Cameron was last evening nominated for United States Senator by a majority of the Union members of the Legislature, nearly every one of whom voted for him, knowing that this selection would be regarded as an insult by the Republicans of his district, and accordingly by the great body of the Republicans of the State. There has never been so studied a violation of public sentiment and public decency as this nomination.—Press, 11*th*.

Liability of Expressmen.—It was decided in the Court of Common Pleas yesterday, that the liability of a baggage expressman was not limited by the words expressed on a check, "will not be liable for an amount exceeding $50 upon any article," and that the word "article" applied to each item of the contents of the trunk, and not to the trunk itself.—New York Herald, Jan. 11.

A New Bedford lady recently wrote to a Boston publishing house for a copy of "Gellert, or Trust in God," and received in reply, "There is no 'Trust in God' to be found in Boston."

LOCAL DEPARTMENT.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.—Rosenbaum announces new and attractive arrivals, to which we would direct the attention of the public.

WE ARE requested to state that Bishop Atkinson will hold divine service at Christ Church, in this city, on the 27th. inst. Candidates for confirmation will make the fact known, in the interim, to Rev. Dr. Mason, the Rector of the Church.

THEIM.—Theim's Variety Store and Temple of Fancy has been removed from the old stand to the rooms immediately beneath the Sentinel office. An announcement of the change is hardly necessary, for Theim has the nack of fixing up the outside of his establishment, wherever it may be, in such a manner as to attract every passer by. But if the outside is thus attractive, what shall be said for the interior? Why, simply, that there are few establishments in any city more complete and unique. His shelves and counters are filled with every thing, literally, that is pleasing to the eye, the fancy and the palate, and all arranged with a degree of taste and elegance that is inimitable. The fact is that Theim's is one of the City lions, and every body who visits Raleigh should at least look in and see the sights.

Our Tuesday Morning Dispatches.

Opinion of the Supreme Court in the Test Oath Cases.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14, P. M.

Associate Justice Field to-day delivered the opinion of the Supreme Court on the Missouri test-oath case,—John A. Cummins, a Roman Catholic Priest, who was indicted for preaching and teaching without taking the oath prescribed by the Constitution of that State, being the Plaintiff in error.

The Court decided the test-oath in this case unconstitutional, being in the nature of a punishment without trial and in its character ex post facto and a bill of attainder. The judgment of the Court below is reversed, with directions that the Plaintiff shall depart without delay.

Associate Justice Field also delivered an opinion of the Court in the ex parte cases of Garland and Marr, who, having taken part in the rebellion, ask to be re-admitted to practice. The Court hold that as the Statute imposes a punishment for that which may not have been punishable at the time the offence was committed, it is in its nature an ex post facto law. Attorneys are not officers of the United States, but are officers of the Court and hold their offices during good behavior. The Court is not the register of the edicts of any other power. The applicants obtained a pardon from the President, which relieves from the consequences of the offence, and makes the citizen, in the eye of the law, what he was before it was committed. Congress cannot limit the prerogative of mercy. It follows that the prayer of the petitioners must be granted, and the rule which requires Attorneys to take the test-oath must be rescinded. The order is made accordingly.

Associate Justice Miller, for himself, Cheif Justice Chase, and Associates Swayne and Davis, read a dissenting opinion.

Learning to Walk.

Only beginning the journey,
Many a mile to go;
Little feet how they patter,
Wandering to and fro.

Trying again, so bravely,
Laughing in baby glee,
Hiding its face in mother's lap,
Proud as a baby can be.

Talking the oddest language
Ever before was heard,
But mother (you'd hardly think so)
Understands every word.

Tottering now and falling,
Eyes that are going to cry;
Kisses and plenty of love-words,
Willing again to try.

Father of all, O guide them,
The pattering little feet,
While they are treading the up-hill,
Braving the dust and heat!

Aid them when they grow weary,
Keep them in pathway blest,
And when the journey's ended,
Saviour, O give them rest!

Horrible Catastrophe---Jail Consumed by Fire---Twenty-two Persons Burned to Death.

We are called upon to record one of the most horrifying and melancholy accidents which has ever occurred within the limits of this State. Though an accident which no caution or foresight could avoid, it will send a thrill of horror through the whole country. On the evening of the 7th instant, between the hours of 8 and 9 P. M., the occupant of the jail heard very suddenly a rumbling noise in the upper stories of the jail, as if the iron grates were being shaken, and immediately followed the cry of fire. He rushed from his room to ascertain whether the jail was on fire or not, and after walking around the jail he observed a little smoke issuing from one of the windows on the third floor; his next object was to open the prison door and extinguish it, but remembering that Mr. Barineau, who was the jailor, and who was living several hundred yards from the jail, had the keys in his possession, he (the occupant of the jail) immediately dispatched a messenger for him. Mr. Barineau, accompanied by the Sheriff, were soon at the jail; in the meantime, however, numbers of persons had collected. The fire, apparently, at this time had not made as rapid progress as was shown in a few minutes, although a dense smoke was issuing from every window. The Sheriff, with the assistance of nearly all the citizens of the village, and the garrison at this place, immediately took the most active measures to save, if possible, the unfortunate inmates.

The door of the basement was opened, but the dense and suffocating smoke prevented any one from rescuing those who occupied the third story. As a last resort, strenuous efforts were then made, with the assistance of ladders, to remove the grating from one of the windows, which proved ineffectual. At this time, the cries and screams of the inmates were heart-rending. The jail was in flames, and twenty-two human beings were being burned to death without any possible relief. Human agency could effect nothing; every effort was made to rescue them which could be suggested, but all to no purpose; the devouring flames soon consumed them, and in the charred ruins is only to be seen the ghastly spectacle of bones. Horrible as the accident may be, and as much as it may be regretted, a consolation follows of having done our duty to the best of our abilities, and that accident is confined to no place or order of circumstances. With us rests the duty, but the result with God.

At the time the jail caught fire there were in it twenty-three prisoners. Twenty two negroes were confined in the upper cells on the third floor, among whom were three women. On the second story Robert H. Flinn, a white man, was confined on bail process. Mr. M. F. McBride, by great daring, rushed to Mr. Flinn's room, which was the first one at the head of the stairway, and unlocked the door, he thereby making his escape. Mr. McBride deserves the highest credit, but in his attempt to save the prisoner he came nigh losing his own life; he fell twice by suffocation before he reached the foot of the staircase.

Where every one did so well it would be wrong to make invidious distinctions; but we cannot withhold our meed of praise of the superhuman efforts of Lieutenant Ross. Private Wm. Green, (who mounted a ladder at the most perilous crisis, and ascended to a window on the third story,) Sheriff Matthews, Mr. Beck, Joe and William Blakely, (colored,) particularly excited our commendation.

As to the origin of the fire we can only conjecture. Whether it was accidental or designed by the prisoners, for the purpose of making their escape, is one of those mysteries that will remain unexplained. A jury of inquest is now sitting for the investigation of the whole matter, but up to the time of going to press they have not rendered their verdict.

Some people are as careful of their troubles as mothers are of their babies; they cuddle them, and rock them, and hug them, and cry over them, and fly into a passion with you if you try to take them away from them; they want you to fret with them, and to help them to believe they have been worse treated than anybody else. If they could, they would have a picture of their grief in a gold frame hung over the mantle shelf for everybody to look at. And their grief makes them ordinarily selfish—they think more of their dear little grief in the basket and in the cradle than they do of all the world besides; and they say you are hard-hearted if you say "don't fret." "Ah! you don't understand me—you dont know me—you can't enter into my trials."
